But right before they start a mortar, a big rolling wave obstructs their view — and you counter-attack. It's just a taste of how Rovio's team-based battler nails the intensity of naval battles. Battle Bay rewards collaboration and strategy - but we love how each litter is always on the verge of colorful chaos. 🐉👤 I love playing this game, and it's a fun game. Unless you have plenty of time Invest. Even worse if you invest a lot of money into it. By that, I mean, that in my opinion, the game doesn't look like it gives you a fair chance at the ranks. Sure, some do - some dont. But the game seems to punish you if you lose too much infasef. It seems they suspect you're a seal clubs and don't reward you as well for good games. I spent (way too much) money upgrading weapons and got some of the best. My infavor was about 3300, but then it started to fall like a rock. Now it's down around 1200 and falling more and more. 1 up, 2 down, it seems. I personally think it's a ploy to get me to spend more money, but I won't, unless what I spent makes a difference. I really can't recommend spending any money on the game if it won't improve anything, or even make play worse. Sounds like conspiracy talk. Maybe it is, maybe it isn't. But strangers are probably to blame. :-P. Play it for fun and not for competition and you'll love it. I'll update it if things change. I played this game for about 2 years, and it was 5star. Through updates the game has gone downhill. Balancing different advantages to make all the boats maneuver better is one. Turn into a game that really drives you to spend money to get to the top tiers and to buy the 2 new boats. I'm a level 47 and all 5 of my boats are level 47 too. It took quite a lot of upgrade. I have unlocked 2 legendary weapons in the first year and can't even sniff out legendary/epic spoilers now to unlock more. That's where they get you to try and spend money. The game has turned into one of those who is about trying to spend your money instead of a good game. Same with guild game. We win quite as a team so you earn coins for prizes. They randomly opt out of 12 boxes and it used to be that you can get good things out of this, and thus work hard as a team to earn the coin. Now it's very rare to get anything that wanted from this. It was one of the best ways to earn pearls and pieces to upgrade weapons. Now it's all basic basic weapon benefits and very small parts you win. You can see the good things to win, but they're just never randomly selected. This game was the best game I've ever played on mobile and I've played a lot of good games and been very successful at. But they ruined it. WICK3D J0K3R is my handle watching me on I've played for some time and you can see I'm not a bot or some angry noob. The developer, Rovio Entertainment Oyj, did not provide details about its privacy practices and handling data to Apple. For more information, see the developer's privacy policy. The developer will be required to provide privacy details when submitting their next app update. Developer website app support privacy policy You check odds are you and most of your family has at one point one of Rovio's games on mobile devices After all, it's hard to find someone who wasn't trying Angry Birds at some point. The simple but ultimately completely addictive, concept made the world by storm. Besides the many games, there is deliciousness, soda, clothes, you name it; the Angry Brids brand is everywhere. There even an animated feature film that tells Sean Penn! Beyond the massive amount of Angry Birds merchandise and spinoffs, Rovio didn't have much success. However, they have tried to look past birds and pigs, and Slaughter Bay is one of the businesses beyond the safety that garment-powered bird action provides. Instead, this game takes inspiration from World of Tanks, but instead of tanks we handle battle ships. As you'd expect it to be a free download. As the app starts, you're taken on a quick tour of what the game has to offer. The control scheme is explained, the economy is outlined, and the various menus to upgrade ships, gear and crew are demonstrated. The user interface is a little junk, so it took a while for us to feel right at home. Things are all the more obvious during the actual fighting. Two teams of five players each are tasked with either taking out all enemy ships, or one team having to assume control of a neutral area on the map. That's it. The controls are easy enough. You send your boat with the virtual control stick, turn the camera by sliding your finger across the screen, and use your weapons by pressing their respective icons. Most of the depth found here is linked to the type of boat and equipment you choose to take with you in battle. It's a slow process and has more to do with what you're comfortable playing and not strategic considerations. You don't know what craft your enemies will take in battle, and you can't eliminate your boat amid battle if you're limited to one life per round. You're stuck with your choice. The ships themselves are pretty hard to control, and we found it difficult to perform the smart manoeuvres needed to fool our enemies. Once we found ourselves winning a game simply by taking over the specified area when everyone else was busy shooting each other. It really feels like most fights play out similarly. After a dozen or so games, we started to wonder if there were some additional game modes we managed to miss in the main menu. We're still unsure how many charts the gameplay features as they are very similar to each other. If you're unhappy and there aren't enough players, the rest of the spots are filled by bots, something that makes it all feel kind of meaningless. The footage is pretty anonymous too, but we like how water is portrayed in the game. It reminds us of what Nintendo did in The Wind Waker, but other than that it's hard to pinpoint any kind of visual identity except the fact that it was technically well made given the platform. Upgrading your ship and your gadgets is unnecessarily complicated, likely to encourage microtran transactions. There are plenty of items to buy to improve your chances of war, and plenty of currencies to buy the upgrades. cubes abound, but this is the least valuable resource. It is used to train your crew and upgrade cannons, among other things. To upgrade cannons, you also need shrapnel divided into different subgroups on rarity. You buy it with gold and you can also buy crates with random rewards by spending stars earned by completing challenges. Finally, there are pearls, and they're used to speeding up your progress. Pearls can be bought with real money. We quickly grew tired of upgrading our ships and gear because there's so much of everything. Especially given how mediocre the real fighting is. The whole point of spending time and resources on upgrading and maintaining your ships is pretty much lost if you feel that you've experienced everything the game has to offer after a dozen or so fights. There simply isn't enough here to draw you in for a long-term addiction. Nothing about Battle Bay stands out. It's not engaging enough or fun enough to extend beyond your visit to the bathroom, but it's not dull or boring enough to leave us angry. We played lesser games on mobile, but then again we also played much better games. Simply put, it's middle of the road stuff. Totally forgettable, and we doubt we'll even remember playing this game six months from now. You are watching Page 2 Continue to Gamereactor.eu Gamereactor.eu
